

JOSEPH MALACHY KAVANAGH 1856-1918

Forgeries and Misattributions

Recent research on the Irish artist, Joseph Malachy Kavanagh, has led to the exposure of a significant number of forgeries passing through the auction rooms over the last 35 years or so, all fully catalogued as Joseph Malachy Kavanagh's autograph work. Many of these are bought from American auction houses by uninformed or unscrupulous dealers, who then pass them off in Ireland, Britain, and elsewhere as autograph works. The majority of these forgeries bear added signatures, invariably in red paint. There is an ill-informed belief in the forgery trade that red paint is not detectable as an addition under ultra violet light. A number of other paintings bear altered signatures and there are also a number of innocent misattributions to add to the confusion. Nevertheless, the great majority of these forgeries are described in the auction catalogues as the work of the Irish artist, Joseph Malachy Kavanagh 1856-1918. The forgeries fall into three main categories:

1. Paintings by unknown artists with forged signatures, mostly in the form of 'J.M. Kavanagh', added in red paint. Many of the forged signatures are very similar, which suggests that many of these forgeries have emanated from one particular forger for export to America;
2. Paintings by an undocumented artist, probably American-Irish, who signed his work M. Kavanagh (see Forgeries no.6 and no.10 for example). These paintings have had a 'J.' added before the 'M' by the forger. M. Kavanagh was perhaps a non-exhibiting journeyman painter specialising in clerical portraits and religious works;
3. Paintings by an American artist, John F. Kavanagh c.1853-c.1898. He signed his work J. Kavanagh. These paintings have been sold unaltered and are classed as misattributions. However, they have also been fraudulently passed off as the work of Joseph Malachy Kavanagh 1865-1918. For example, Eldreds, East Dennis, USA, were informed before their auction on the 11th February 2021 that 'Woman by a Lake' [see page 5] was by John F. Kavanagh and not Joseph Malachy Kavanagh. However, they ignored the advice and sold the painting as a work by the Irish artist.

=====

Dominic Milmo-Penny has been involved in the fine art trade since 1963 when he worked as an assistant to Monty Siev, Dublin's leading dealer at that time. This was followed by six years technical study during which time he developed the examination techniques he employs today. In 1974, he established Milmo-Penny Fine Art Limited, a private dealership specialising in late 19th century Irish and European paintings. Over the following years, he developed a specialist expertise in the detection of forgery. His particular skills were commissioned by the National Gallery of Ireland in 1996 when they attributed 'The Goose Girl', one of their most popular paintings, to the Sheffield artist, Stanley Royle, thus ending a controversy, which had run for twenty years or so. In March 2018, he presented a talk on art forgery during the 'Fake' exhibition at the Science Gallery, Trinity College Dublin. In June 2018, he was invited by Forensic Science Ireland to deliver a talk on art forgery at Garda Headquarters, Dublin.
